Painters' and Paper-Hangers' Strike.

A union meeting of the painters and paper-hangers was held in the A. R. hall, Douglas street, yesterday afternoon. The men are unanimous in their determination not to go to work to-morrow in any shop in which non-unionists are employed. A Bee reporter has interviewed a large number of the union workmen, and it is universally claimed by them that at the time of settlement of the last strike they were willing and desirous to act in concert with those of the trade not belonging to their order, and that the present strike is not in any way an attempt on their part to build up either the non-unionists or the masters. At the conclusion of the former dispute it was agreed that no discrimination should be between union men and non-unionists, and the arrangement was made that the former claim was entirely satisfactory to them until some of the masters reduced the rates of wages and broke the terms of their agreement.

A few shops in which none but union men are employed will be at work to-morrow, but the large majority will be idle until the settlement of the present dispute.

THE PAINTERS' SIDE.

The following communication is from the chairman state executive board of the state assembly:

OMAHA, Neb., June 19, 1887.—Editor of the Bee:—In the issue of the 18th inst. of this morning, I noticed a card signed "M. P." which may be interpreted "Member of Parliament," or "Mortar Painter," which contains a correct statement of the trouble existing between the master painters and the Painters' Assembly, K. of L. of Omaha.

1. The demand of the strike in regard to wages and time, was complied with by a portion of the master painters, and that compact was violated by another portion of them. 2. There was no breach of faith on the part of the assembly painters, nor did they ask that the master painters would discharge their non-union painters. They asked that no discrimination should be made, but found that at the end of one month, from fifty to sixty union painters were "let out," or discharged, on one and another pretext, and were out of employment, and that about all of the non-union men in Omaha were at work.

3d. The state executive board of the Knights of Labor did not demand the discharge of a single non-union painter. They requested the master painters to make the shops union shops, and agreed that all the non-union men should be taken into the painters' assembly. They expressly told the master painters that they recognized the fact that they had a right to employ whom they pleased, and the Knights of Labor proposed to only exercise their right of refusing to work with non-union men. The negotiations were carried on by the executive board in a spirit of fairness and without any threat or bluster, and the man who signed himself "M. P." certainly knows that the fair minded members of his own association will not bear him out in his statement.

The strike was ordered because a majority of the master painters association had violated their agreement. The executive board believes that they could do no less than stand by these men, as a failure to do so would have led to a dissolution of 1886, and after this had been accomplished, the same trade and assemblies would have shared the same fate.

The master Painters' association lived up to their agreement and will not suffer. As we understand they intend making their shops union shops. In that event the men ordered back to work in such shops this morning.

Very respectfully,
W. C. HOLDEN.

BACCALAUREATE SERMON.

Rev. W. J. Harsho Addresses the Graduating Class of the High School.

Rev. W. J. Harsho preached the annual Baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the high school at the Dodge street Presbyterian church yesterday morning. The pulpit was decorated with flowers in honor of the occasion.

Mr. Harsho took as his text Luke II, chapter and 81st verse, "Behold a greater than Solomon is here." The preacher began by saying that this sentence is not an evidence of envy, as some prominent thinkers have supposed; it was simply the statement of a great fact, because he was the son of God. He was greater than any man, even the king. There are three great needs of human life—inspired friendship and salvation. The old Jewish writers claim for Solomon that he was the wisest instructor, the best friend and the most efficient intercessor with God that had lived up till the time of Christ, and the preacher claimed that in Jesus of Nazareth we had one who in these same particulars is greater than Solomon. As an instructor Christ was greater, because he could reveal things that were absolutely new. He knew the future, and the man only knew the past. He understood heaven, while Solomon only knew the earth. Moreover, Christ could invite imitation of his life, and say to all men, "Do as I do, and ye shall share this." This Solomon could not do; he spoke wisely but acted unwisely; he advocates the highest virtue, but himself fell into deepest sin. Because of his purity, therefore, Christ was the greater friend. Friend Solomon will of course be greatly courted. Any Jewish father would have regarded it as a great favor to have his son stand continually before the king's face. To have a friend at court has always been regarded as the highest earthly happiness. Yet Christ offers a friendship far more precious than that of Solomon even. He can be with us at all times; He can soothe us in our sickness and walk with us through the darkness of death, and so He is the best friend that man ever had. Solomon made intercession with the people on the temple, and prayed for them with his hands outstretched to God, yet he was only a man. Christ did more than that; He died on the cross and made an atonement for the sins of all. Is He not greater than Solomon?

In conclusion he urged the graduating class to accept Christ as their instructor, friend and savior.

Morning Fire.

A barn belonging to J. V. Sweeney, on Fifteenth street near Capitol avenue was burned this morning about 2 o'clock. There were two horses and three sets of harness in the stable. Mr. Sweeney was awakened and saved the horses; the harness were destroyed. Loss about $200; no insurance. A white horse cart was hurrying to the fire, the wheels struck a pile of rock on Izard street and threw driver Krogger to the ground. He was somewhat bruised, but not seriously injured. The horses dashed on with the apparatus to Douglas street, thence to Sixth and Leavenworth before being caught.

The Sunday Gardens.

Yesterday all the beer and dance halls in the city were, kept open as usual, notwithstanding the alleged order to the contrary issued a week ago. They were all well patronized, and the day was passed without any unpleasant circumstance to mar the peace and quiet. The gardens on Vinton street did a thriving business. Paul Senf joined with Spoel and Fritz Mueller in charging admission to his garden. This will be a greater means of attaining better order in the future.

All Closed But One.

The order prohibiting music and dancing in the beer gardens on Sunday evenings was very generally observed yesterday and last night. At Kessler's the local Bohemians had full charge, enjoying a picnic. At the other gardens everything was remarkably quiet.
